DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1 and 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The phrase "whereby the through-bolt is subject to bending stress since it does not operate on a solid stack up regardless of alignment" is vague and indefinite.

What alignment is the applicant referring to?

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-8, is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nelson (5210453) in view of Koppel (5433570).

Nelson discloses an electrical ac generator in fig.3 having a housing (16) including a drive-end portion (12) and a mounting-end portion (20), and a stator (22) mountable for rotation within the housing. Wherein, one of the end portions including a plurality of circumferentially spaced ears (17,46) having first apertures (A) therein and the other of said end portions including a corresponding plurality of circumferentially spaced ears (13) having threaded apertures received in one of said threaded apertures to bolt the housing ends together against the stator with a through-bolt (18) comprising a head portion (44), a elongated shank portion (c) and a threaded portion (42) extending from the elongated shank portion whereby the through bolt is subject to bending stress..

Nelson does not disclose, the shank portion being neck down adjacent said threaded portion to a diameter sufficiently less than a minor diameter of threads in said threaded portion.

Koppel discloses a screw in fig.1 having an elongated shank (8), a head portion (3) and two neck down portion (10) adjacent to the threaded portion of the shank. Wherein the diameter is sufficiently less than a minor diameter of the threads in the threaded portion of the shank for the withstanding forces acting on the head of the screw (making it fatigue resistant). Therefore it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill at the time the invention was made to modify the ac generator of Nelson with the screw of Koppel for the purpose eliminating bending load and thereby Improving fatigue characteristics.

Referring to claims 4 and 8. No patentable weight has been given to the method of manufacturing limitations (i. e. rolled) since "even though product-by-process claims are limited by and defined by the process, determination of patentability is based on the product itself. The patentability of a product does not depend on its method of production. If the product in the product-by-process claim is the same as or obvious from a product of the prior art, the claim is unpatentable even though the prior product was made by a different process." In re Thorpe, 777 F.2d 695, 698, 227 USPQ 964, 966 (Fed. Cir. 1985)

Response to Arguments

In response to applicant's argument that Nelson's patent concentrates on avoiding noise caused by the vibration of the bolt head along the face of the ears they engage and therefore does not suggest either the problem or the solution, which have been identified by applicants in the present application, is noted.

However, the fact the applicant uses an identical alternator having substantially the same structure of Nelson for a different purpose does not alter the conclusion that its use in a prior art device would be prima facie obvious from the purpose disclosed in the reference." In re Lintner, 173 USPQ 560.

In response to applicant's argument that Koppel discloses a screw in which there is a problem with bending but no indication of a problem with vibration in the case of the AC motor is noted.

However, the fact that the applicant uses a bolt having substantially the same structure of Koppel for a different purpose does not alter the conclusion that its use in a prior art device would be prima facie obvious from the purpose disclosed in the reference." In re Lintner, 173 USPQ560.

Koppel discloses a bolt with similar characteristic of that of Nelson with the exception of the bolt having a neck down bottle portions for the purpose of purpose of absorbing bending loads and making it fatigue resistance.

In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992).
